Luc(as) de Groot, born in the Netherlands in 1963, studied type design and typography at the Royal Academy of Fine Arts in The Hague under Gerrit Noordzij.

He then spent four years with the Dutch design group BRS Premsele, working mainly on corporate identities.

A period of freelancing and teaching at the Art Academy in Den Bosch followed before Luc(as) moved to Berlin in 1993 to work with MetaDesign for four years. In 1997 he founded FontFabrik in Berlin.

Devoted to type day and night, Luc(as) admits to occasionally finding time for sleep between working, reading, writing and drawing.

The fonts in the LucasFonts collection, an eclectic mix of serif, sans-serif and display, offer perfect solutions for typographic branding in graphic design, advertising and publishing.

Self-portrait at 6 in the morning.

'Many of the current digital typefaces are nothing more than very weak derivations of faces that were beautiful in hot metal and photo-typesetting. They are poorly digitized by technicians without feeling for type, with only financial interests.'

I would rather read a page in a face that is deliberately bad than text in poorly digitized Bembo, Helveticas, Times and even Frutiger. It makes me very sad to see digital type so far from the original designs.'

Today's type hype will even grow bigger. Now that every office printer can print many different types, people are forced to choose, and become more aware of type.'

Thesis

LucasFonts shown on the following pages are either the original components of Luc(as) de Groot's Thesis project or derivations. Completed in 1994 the original Thesis comprised 3 distinct letterforms – TheSans, TheSerif and TheMix, each in 8 weights, Extra Light to Black, and each weight in 6 variants, Plain, Italic, Small Caps, Small Caps Italic, Expert and Expert Italic. In all, that is a total of 144 different fonts. New additions include Basic versions of each Thesis component; a Condensed version of TheSans; Office, Mono and Typewriter versions; and a traditional serif version TheAntiqua.
